Issue 209 8 June 2009

Raising aspirations

HACKNEY'S newest school, the City Academy in Homerton, is in the final stages of building work. Mayor of Hackney Jules Pipe visited the Homerton school, which is due to open its doors to the first intake of 210 Year Seven students in September. He was welcomed by Principal Mark Emmerson on June 3. During the visit, Mayor Pipe met Richard Reid, of KPMG, and Catherine McGuinness, of

The City of London Corporation and chair of governors, as well as key members of the project and construction teams. The Mayor said: "The Council's commitment to continually improve education services in Hackney is reflected by the efforts of everyone involved in this project. The City Academy, the fourth of our five new secondary schools, will open in September and play a key part in raising aspirations, helping the young people of Hackney access the support they need to succeed." For more details see Mayor's column, p2

SUMMER OF FUN

By
Gracia Douglas

YOUNG people will be within easy reach of a whole range of activities throughout the summer, as the Council steps up its commitment to making Hackney a good place to grow up.

An increased number of youth clubs will be open until 9pm across the borough, including several every Friday evening.

It's part of a £3.7m commitment over the next two years for positive activities for young people, including arts, sports and outdoors; schemes for those interested in youth enterprise, leadership and social action; school holiday activities; and specialist provision for young offenders and those at risk of offending.

For example, since April the Baseline Project has been at Stamford Hill Community Centre every Thursday from 6pm, and although all young people are welcome, the scheme targets those involved in or at risk of becoming involved in crime.

The Council has commissioned a range of evening workshops over the summer, including free photography tuition for those aged between 13 and 25 at Hoxton's Blue Hut in Provost Street, every Tuesday between 3.30pm and 9pm.

Other offerings include six-weeks of hip-hop dance, music and art at Hoxton Hall; football sessions at Kingsmead Community Sports Club; a Hackney parks tennis tournament; and Access to Sports, which specifically targets hard-to-reach groups of 8-19-year-olds.

Cllr Rita Krishna, Cabinet Member for Children's Services, said: "Hackney has among the highest numbers of young residents in London, and they are our greatest asset. Our young people have fantastic talent and resourcefulness, and we are committed to providing top quality services for them."

Message from the Mayor

New school is top of its class

Building work on the new City Academy is nearly complete

LAST week I visited the fourth of our new secondary schools, The City Academy, Hackney, which is opening in September in Homerton. Like our other new schools, this is a non-selective, non-denominational school that will educate 900 boys and girls and, eventually, an additional 240 students in the sixth form.

Along with leading figures from the school's sponsors – The City of London and accountancy firm KPMG – I was shown around the £35 million building by its Principal, Mark Emmerson, a very experienced former Hackney headteacher.

I saw the progress being made to finish the buildings that will house many state-of-the-art facilities, such as a theatre and assembly hall, a sports hall and fitness centre, a well-equipped library, a teaching kitchen with industry standard equipment, a radio station, a media editing suite, open-plan art room facilities and leading-edge computer and technology provision including a laptop for every student.

Many of these facilities will be available for the local community in the evenings and at weekends. Along with the Skinner's Academy, for which preparatory works have already started on site up at Woodberry Down, these five new schools have the kind of facilities that should be available for all young people in Hackney, not just a privileged few. That's why that in addition to building new schools, it was essential that all our existing secondary schools should be upgraded through the Building Schools for the Future programme – the first two due for completion next year.

All of Hackney's young people deserve the best: the best schools, the best facilities, and the best teachers.

A volunteer takes a man's blood pressure at the fair in Dalston

By

Marcel Reinard

A SERIES of events have helped raise the profile of people who give up their time for free during Volunteers Week, which celebrated its 25th anniversary this year.

A celebration of the millions who contribute to society, while inspiring others to do the same, was held from 1-7 June, and was marked with a series of events throughout the borough.

Volunteers and staff from the Council, the 2012 Unit, and Hackney Voluntary Action (HVA) took part in outreach work and volunteer promotion in Mare Street, Dalston and Well Street to increase awareness.

Another highlight was a volunteer fair in Dalston Lane, where residents got a chance to pick up information about volunteering and meet representatives from organisations on the look out for help. Activities also included face-painting for children, live music and a donation raffle.

Raymond Bradley, a young member of volunteer group Groundwork London, which recently won an Investing in Volunteers award from HVA, said: "The last thing I was involved in was helping out with Adult Learning Week, another time it was cooking on a fire pit.

"You can gain all sorts of skills and it's beneficial. To be honest if I hadn't done it in the first place I don't know where I'd be."

Hackney Homes gardeners show school children how to grow their own (above); and cleaners on an estate keeping communal areas clean and welcoming (top right)

By
Olaide Oyekanmi

A TEAM of gardeners and estate cleaners from Hackney Homes has reached the last six in the best customer services team category of a national award.

The 300-strong team, which ensure the upkeep of estates in the borough, has been shortlisted from among hundreds of entries for the Housing Heroes 2009 awards.

They have been recognised for the way they help vulnerable residents by assisting with gardens and offering support during bad weather, as well as for the community initiatives that they give time to, such as garden schemes for young children. Political pundit and former MP Michael Portillo will announce the winner at a ceremony in central London on 10 June.

Hackney Homes Chief Executive, Charlotte Graves said: "We are pleased that our cleaners and gardeners are being recognised in this way. The hard work that they do on estates every day does not go unnoticed by local people, and this is a testament to that."

NEWS IN BRIEF

Carers' ticket to ride

CARERS are being invited to jump aboard for an illuminating Routemaster bus trip around the borough.

In celebration of National Carers Week from 8-14 June, they will be taken on a magical mystery bus tour to explore Hackney and find out more about services available to them.

Carers provide unpaid assistance by looking after an ill, frail or disabled family member, partner or friend. This year's National Carers Week highlights their role as the country's 'secret service' in providing help that is vital but often overlooked.

Mayor of Hackney Jules Pipe, and Cllr Nargis Khan, Cabinet Member for Community Services, will meet the tour at 11am on 11 June before the bus departs at 11:30am.

The Council provides a range of support services for carers, including a free two-day retreat; free training courses; support accessing work and education opportunities; an emergency home respite service; and the Carers Card that offers concessionary rates of up to 50 per cent at Council leisure centres and discounts at shops.

Fined for after-hours sales

A PUB landlord who sold alcohol more than two hours after the time allowed by his license has been prosecuted by the Council. Umit Moroglu, licensee of the Marquis of Lansdowne in Stoke Newington Road, N16, pleaded guilty at Thames Magistrates Court on 27 May to selling alcohol beyond the hours permitted by his premise's license. He was fined £2015, with costs of £973.

Moroglu had previously been warned by the Council, but when the licensing enforcement team visited the pub at 1.15am, they found alcohol was being served. The licence allows it to be sold until 11pm.

Cllr Alan Laing, Cabinet Member for Neighbourhoods, said: "The landlord knew the law and chose to ignore it. This sort of behaviour is totally unacceptable, and those who choose to flout the law will be prosecuted. We will not turn a blind eye to this sort of negligent conduct and we demand the highest standards from our pubs. Landlords have to act responsibly and run their businesses in a legal manner." Anybody wishing to vary the hours or conditions of their current premises licence – or apply for a new one – can obtain an application form by calling: 020 8356 2431.

Winning spaces

TWO buildings in Hackney have been recognised with gongs at the 2009 Royal Institute of British Architects (RIBA) Awards.

Hothouse in London Fields, E8, was also the winner of a Hackney Design Award 2008. It is a centre of community-based regeneration and offers workspace for creative industries in a new building, and by using refurbished railway arches. It was described by RIBA as an office "brimming with playfulness".

The second winner, Frame House, E9, is a model for inner-city green living with its use of wood-pellet heating systems, rainwater recycling and high levels of insulation.

The architects for Hothouse and Framehouse were Ash Sakula Architects and Flacq Architects, respectively.

Inspiring changes

By

A UNIQUE project that gives residents the chance to record how the forthcoming Olympic and Paralympic Games in 2012 are changing their lives has received an award.

Mapping the Change, delivered by Hackney Museum and the Archives, has won the London Organising Committee of the Olympic Games' (LOCOG) Inspire Mark.

Cllr Nargis Khan, Hackney Council Cabinet Member for Community Services said: "As a London 2012 host borough, Hackney is seeing a lot of change.

"I congratulate Hackney Museum and Hackney Archives for their success on receiving an Inspire

Mark, as it is crucial for us to learn about and have a record of how the Games changed the landscape and people of Hackney.

"Mapping the Change is primarily a community project that I hope many residents will get involved with it."

I hope many residents will get involved over the next few years

The project will culminate in an exhibition in 2012. For those who can't wait that long, an exhibition with an Olympic and Paralympic focus has just gone on display at the museum in Reading Lane, E8. The Big Blue Fence runs until 31 August. It includes memorabilia from the last

London Games in 1948, and looks ahead to 2012. Over the next few months artists and archivists will be running a series of workshops for schools, community groups and members of the public. The results will gradually be added to the Big Blue Fence.

Also at the museum is a display of work by young people admitted to the Coborn Centre for Adolescent Mental Health. My Expressions is the work of 12-18-year-olds who worked with multimedia artist Beyonder, and musician Prithpal for five weeks. It runs until 29 August.

As part of the Story of London festival, the Archives are running a series of events this month. There will be book readings on 10 June at Hackney Central Library and at Shoreditch Library on 16 June. A workshop on the

Finding out about fostering

DOZENS of people attended an event to find out more about how to become a foster carer.

To mark National Foster Care Fortnight, a special Think About Fostering event took place at YumYum Thai Restaurant in Stoke Newington.

New foster carers are always needed and Hackney is particularly looking for people who can offer a home to teenagers, young mothers and babies, siblings, and children with disabilities. People who went to the event last month were able to chat to the Council's fostering team, as well as some carers, about what taking on a child can involve.

Cllr Rita Krishna, Cabinet Member for Children's Services, said: "The Council needs a whole range of foster carers who reflect the diversity of children that come into local authority care. If people feel they have the skills, qualities and space to care for a child, I urge them to get in touch."

Visitors were also able to talk to staff from Hackney's Multidimensional Treatment Foster Care (MTFC) programme, an innovative pilot scheme designed to assist children aged 6-11 who have significant difficulties in social and family relationships.

Drink and drug

Case study

HACKNEY resident Michael Ladipo, 47, knows just how important it is to find help. Less than a year ago, following 14 years using crack cocaine, he found himself under arrest. At the police station he was visited by a drugs counsellor and he decided to get treatment.

Now Michael is helping other drug users, working as a volunteer at the Blenheim CPD project where he also received his own treatment. He plans to qualify as a drugs worker himself, giving people in treatment the benefit of his experience.

He sits on the DAAT's service users' forum. This gives people who have gone through treatment and reached a period of stability the chance to give something back – and ensures that services are in touch with clients' needs. Forum members receive training and the latest recruits were presented with certificates at the DAAT annual conference.

Michael said: "Don't be scared. Nobody judges you. Just get help."

Taking action

By

HELP and information will be on offer at a series of events in Hackney's parks for anybody concerned about drugs and alcohol.

Every day during National Tackling Drugs Week the Council's Drug and Alcohol Action Team (DAAT) will visit a park to tell people where they can go to get help locally for drink and drug problems.

The DAAT held its tenth annual conference on 29 May. It saw the launch of a consultation on its strategy for reducing the harm caused by alcohol, which is due to be implemented in the autumn.

Cllr Alan Laing, Cabinet Member for Neighbourhoods said: "Alcohol and drug misuse harm individuals, families and the community, and it's an issue the Council is taking very seriously.

"Help is available. Over 1,700 people in Hackney are benefiting from specialist drug services and over 500 are being treated for problems with alcohol."

NEWS IN BRIEF

Improving service for children

A NEW online national directory that will allow people working with children to deliver a more co-ordinated service is due to be launched in Hackney in August. ContactPoint, which councils must implement under the Children Act, aims to allow users to find out who else is working with a child or young person, share information, avoid duplication and work as a team to improve services for young people.

The directory will contain the child's name, and contact details of the parents and carers, schools, GPs and any other services working with the child. However, information on some children will be hidden or shielded if certain criteria are met, such as if the child or families may be subject to increased harm. Requests for a record to be shielded can be made by practitioners, parents and carers. For more info call 020 8356 4776; e-mail: contactpoint@hackney.gov.uk; or visit: www.hackney.gov.uk/contactpoint

Work with older people praised

AN initiative set up to uphold the dignity of older people in care across the borough has won a Success in Partnership gong at the London Regional Health and Social Care Awards.

The Older People's Dignity Code was developed by the Older People's Reference Group, and is supported by the Council. City & Hackney PCT, Homerton Hospital, East London NHS Foundation Trust have all signed up. NHS City and Hackney also scooped the Innovative Health and Social Care Technology Award on the night, for the sexual health 'SHO-me' campaign, which provided free condoms, contraceptive advice and pregnancy tests, as well as screening for chlamydia, gonorrhoea and HIV for 7,500 residents.

Try something nifty if you are over fifty

FROM seaside trips and free cinema matinees, to strawberry picking and dancing, there's something for all of Hackney's over-50s in the 15th annual Festival for Older People.

Throughout June and July, ending with a song and dance finale on 6 August, there are 30 events and activities planned, including bingo, various seaside outings, a Hackney Empire talent contest, and a street party.

The festival begins on 18 June at King's Hall Leisure Centre, in Lower Clapton Road, from 12noon-3pm.

A new prevention and well-being plan will be launched to help older people stay healthy and independent. Visitors can also find out more about services for older people. There is a tea dance scheduled, as well as exercise activities at the Britannia, Clissold and

King's Hall leisure centres, and the Queensbridge Sports and Community Centre. Free film screenings will also be taking place at the Community Resource Team Hall, in Stoke Newington, and the Rio Cinema in Dalston.

Booking ahead is necessary for most events.

Pupils demonstrate their skills at the boccia tournament

By
Emma Britton

PUPILS from five primary schools across Hackney have battled it out in a tournament of the Paralympic sport boccia.

Children from primary schools Jubilee, N16, St John the Baptist C of E, N1, Whitmore, N1, Nightingale, E5, and Millfields, E5, took part in the wheelchair sport – similar to boules, the French variant of British lawn bowling – after four months of coaching.

The 70 young competitors were joined by Beijing 2008 Paralympic swimmer Dervis Konuralp who umpired games and presented awards.

“A great chance for disabled and non-disabled children to get together and have fun”

Dervis, also Hackney's Olympic and Paralympic ambassador, said: “The children really got into the spirit of the day and I was proud to be able to encourage them. Sport is so accessible and I hope the 2012 Games can inspire people of all ages and abilities to try out a new activity.”

The final was between two teams from Jubilee primary school, with Team A taking the top spot.

Cllr Guy Nicholson, Cabinet Member for Regeneration and the 2012 Olympic and Paralympic Games, added: “This was a great chance for disabled and non-disabled children to get together and have fun competing in an inclusive Paralympic sport they have been practising at school.”

The event took place at the SPACe sports centre, Hackney Community College, and was organised by community organisation East End Sports Ability, with the support of the Council's 2012 Olympic and Paralympic Games Unit.

KEY FACT
Over 10,000 people claim Disability Living Allowance in the borough, and there are an estimated 18,000 carers in Hackney

Information was on hand for carers at their recent conference (above); representatives from over 120 organisations gave feedback at a TRASC conference in May (top left); and councillors discuss how best to lead the programme at ward level (above left); over-50s can give feedback on plans at the launch of the annual festival for older people (below left & right)

By Paul Knipe

MAJOR changes on the way mean that Hackney residents who use social services will soon have more choice and control over support they receive, and will be able to lead more independent lives.

The transformation of adult social care (TRASC) programme is part of a national plan to change the way social services works. It is taking place in response to the fact that people are living longer, and asking for more control over their care.

A new system called self-directed support has already been tested successfully by a number of people in the borough. It will be phased into current services from next year, and will mean that people can choose their own care

“It’s our responsibility to make sure services are of the highest quality and shaped by local feedback”

Improvements are also planned to how the services providing social care work together, and to the quality of information available, with the aim of helping people lead healthier lives.

Cllr Nargis Khan, Cabinet Member for Community Services, said: “The Council is working with the Primary Care Trust and other local organisations to design services that are right for people in Hackney.

Ongoing support

'You get control of your life back'

CASE STUDY: Peter Hilton

PETER suffered a stroke that left him wheelchair bound with speech and other mobility problems. His wife Janice cares for him full time. But since getting an individual budget through the Council's pilot scheme their lives have changed for the better.

"The individual budget has given us more freedom," explains Janice. "Before we used to have different people from social care coming to the house all the time throughout the day, but now we set the time people come and it's always the same few faces."

“Now I can relax and do things I want to do more of the time – I’ve even painted my house”

Janice has noticed that Peter is happier since he started getting an individual budget, something she puts down to flexibility and freedom.

"Peter is more relaxed now and less confused. It pays for two nights every fortnight when he goes out and sees friends."

And as a full-time carer, the budget has helped Janice as well. "My life is better, as now I'm in control," she says. "I set the times on everything for everybody so I can take a break in between, when I want. Now I can relax and do things I want to do more of the time – I've even painted my house. You get control of your life back."

Janice recommends individual budgets to other carers she meets: "I tell them about how it can help and how it is different to direct payments. I tell them that this is the start of changes in their life as well as the person they are caring for. I tell them every time – go for it – it's very good."

"It's our responsibility to make sure they are of the highest quality and shaped by local feedback."

Hugh goes where?

By
Karyn Michael

DON'T have an 'off button', says Dr Hugh Montgomery, sea diver, skydiver, long-distance runner, high-altitude mountaineer, genetics researcher, writer, director of the Institute of Human Health Performance, and Professor of Intensive Care Medicine at University College London.

This month, he is embarking on his latest adventure – a 135km run along the Pilgrim's Way in northern Spain. He will be raising money for the Safe Hands For Mothers charity, which aims to reduce pregnancy-related deaths among women in developing countries.

Most people walk the Pilgrim's Way in five or six days, but Hugh will be attempting to complete the entire 90 miles – from Triacastela to the holy city of Santiago de Compostela – in just one day, a daunting prospect for anyone, even for him.

Hugh says: "I used to do a lot of 100k races, but I was younger and a lot fitter, so it's not going to be easy. But given the suffering that women around the world are going through, then the suffering I will experience on the day is going to be insignificant in comparison."

Now 46, Hugh has been getting into shape, running in Victoria Park and the Lea Valley estuary. He has been living near the park for nine years, and finds the location agrees with him from the point of view of work and leisure.

“Hackney is green with good cycle routes. In an emergency I need to be at hospital in 20 minutes”

He says: "The area is 'green' with good cycle routes. In an emergency I need to be at hospital in 20 minutes, which I can easily do by bike from here. Also, it is possible to walk into town along the canal."

Pushing the human body to its physical limits has been a major focus of Hugh's medical career. In 2000, he made a major scientific breakthrough when he identified a gene responsible for fitness.

He discovered one in four people are born with a genetic combination that enables them to respond better to training, although he says he does not have the gene himself.

Most people take five or six days to walk the Pilgrim's Way in northern Spain — Hugh Montgomery plans to complete all 90 miles in one day

So what keeps him motivated? A combination of factors. "Firstly I like to push myself. Secondly if you are doing a long race or climbing a big mountain, you get to spend time with genuine, kind, enthusiastic and committed people and share their company. Thirdly, the aesthetic. Being in these places is immensely beautiful."

Interestingly, none of his physical feats factor

among his greatest achievements, for he is most proud of his children's novel, 'The Voyage of the Arctic Tern' a tale of treason, treachery and treasure on the high seas.

So what next for the south Hackney resident? Locally, he is working with primary schools to engage them in environmental issues. He is also halfway through writing his next book.

Hugh has thought about rowing across the Atlantic or swimming the English Channel, even though he finds the prospect swimming for hours on end 'monumentally boring'. But you get the feeling he might just do it anyway.

THE GREEN GENIE

All your recycling questions answered

Q: I was recently delayed by recycling collection lorries. Why do these vehicles block roads during busy periods, and is there anything that can be done to speed up collections?

A: The Council apologises for any delays to other road users caused by the collection of refuse and recycling in the borough. However, it has a legal obligation to provide these services and aims to do so as quickly as possible. Unfortunately, due to the stop-start nature of the work, and the size of the trucks, some inconvenience will be inevitable.

Truck drivers know to pull over where possible, to allow other road users to pass. But where this is not possible, Health and Safety Executive guidance states that lorries should position themselves in the centre of the road to prevent other vehicles attempting to pass through small gaps, reducing the chance of injury to workers.

Residents can help to speed collections up by putting their green box out by 7.30am on their collection day, and by grouping similar materials such as paper, glass bottles and jars; and tins and cans together.

Roof on the up

By
Marcel Reinard

A ROOFTOP at Frampton Park Estate, E9, is set to come alive with wildlife after being covered with a blanket of greenery.

The top of Tradescant House has been transformed as part of Hackney Homes' Decent Homes programme.

It is now covered with a blanket of sedum, a plant similar to everyday grass, which will improve the building's thermal performance.

Cllr Sophie Linden, Cabinet Member for Sustainability said: "The roofs improve Hackney's landscape, and the added insulation could help cut energy costs, can encourage wildlife and help our drive to make Hackney greener and cleaner."

Like most plants, sedum can also help reduce pollutants and dust particles in the air. An influx of birds is also expected once the plants have flowered. Ian Palmer, project surveyor for roofing waterproofer Bauder Limited, which funded the planting in partnership with Hackney Homes, said: "The sedum blanket retains 40 per cent of rainfall which slows down and reduces the levels of rainwater entering the drainage system to lessen the risk of flash flooding.

“The added insulation could help cut energy costs and can encourage wildlife”

"Another benefit is that, because the waterproofing itself is protected by the sedum blanket, the life expectancy of the roof is extended."

Once the roof coverings have settled, residents should expect white, pink and purple flowers blossoming during the summer.

Look on the light side of life

STREET lighting in Hackney is set to get brighter and more energy-efficient as trials for new products begin.

Using light emitting diodes (LEDs), will make footpaths brighter and aid safety after dark. Lanterns illuminated by LEDs burn for up to 100,000 hours, which could also significantly reduce annual maintenance costs.

Alleys and communal areas with low lighting have already been identified as the first sites that could benefit from the new technology. The latest trials follow smaller installations of LED street lighting in Homerton Terrace and Shoreditch Park.

Five manufacturers of LEDs have been invited to supply equipment. The product that provides the best levels of lighting and most favourable feedback from residents is likely to be used in the long-term throughout the borough.

Cllr Alan Laing, Cabinet Member for Neighbourhoods, said: "We have been using LED lanterns to illuminate highway bollards and traffic signs in Hackney for a number of years and are keen to make use of new technology.

"We want to lead the way on introducing more green and sustainable lighting as we know residents want us to play our part in reducing global warming."

Wood you like to walk or ride?

By Marcel Reinard

MORE than 50 people took part in a spring evening walk in Abney Park, N16, organised by local voluntary group the Tree Musketeers.

Focusing on biodiversity, member Russell Miller led the walkers, and talked about the wide range of creatures that coexist in trees.

As an example, he explained how the fungus sooty bark disease, found in sycamore trees, acts as food for mice; and the mice then become food for tawny owls nesting in the trees.

Russell also spoke of how the impact of global warming is affecting the trees in the park at a local level.

On 21 June the Musketeers plan to celebrate the longest day of the year with a free Solstice Tree Wheel cycle-tour of Hackney's trees.

It will start from the Gascoyne Road side of Well Street Common, E9, at 11am and will last about two hours. All are welcome but under-18s must be accompanied by an adult.

Participants should bring water and a snack.

Green-fingered Harrington pupils hard at work

CHILDREN at Harrington Hill Primary, E5, are getting stuck into learning about vegetables – by growing their own.

Eight pupils aged between 10 and 11, helped by teachers and a local gardening enthusiast, started the project by planting seeds in February. They have asked teachers, friends and family to 'adopt a vegetable' by providing sponsorship to help the small garden along in return for some of the produce.

The harvest should include a variety of beans, root vegetables, and some fruit. Mac, the school's retired volunteer helper, explained that the garden had been built because some of the children did not have one of their own. He said: "Food just doesn't get any fresher than this. There are fruit trees and some flowers. It is really proving to be a big success. Once the vegetables are ready there will be some cooking classes. The students will have gone from seed to plants, and plants to plate in just two terms!"

HCEO is a longstanding day service providing support for Caribbean Elders in Hackney. The service is held in high esteem across the borough and is experiencing increasing demand. We are currently recruiting for two posts and welcome applications from suitably skilled individuals who are able to work sensitively with the needs of this community.

Operations Manager
– HCEO Day Service
£25,267 - £26,739 (inc ILW).
Permanent (2 year contract)
subject to funding.
Closing Date – 19th June

The Operations Manager will be responsible for all aspects of service coordination and delivery. Included within the remit is financial and profile management. The successful candidate will have some experience of project management, in particular providing services for older people.

Project Co-ordinator –
Advocacy and Outreach Project
£25,267 - £26,739 (inc ILW). Fixed Term: estimated 7 - 12 months, depending on funding.
Closing Date – 19th June

We have recently secured funding for a new 'Advocacy and Outreach Project'. The Project Co-ordinator will work to establish the service in addition to assisting users to develop support plans. The successful candidate will have experience of working with older people, in particular in an advocacy role.

Further details of both posts are provided in the application packs. Please call or email for an application pack stating which of the positions you are interested in.

Children in the borough met a real-life giant, author Philip Ardagh, who told them about the joys of reading

Literary giant's visit

By
Nick Rutherford

ONCE upon a time there was a giant – a gentle giant, mind you – who visited a school to tell children about the joys of reading.

Author Philip Ardagh – who is 6ft 7in tall and has written more than 70 books, including a collaboration with Sir Paul McCartney, and the popular Eddie Dickens series – delighted a group of 200 primary school pupils with his anecdotes.

Children in years three and four, from Lauriston, Berger, London Fields and St John of Jerusalem primaries joined pupils at Orchard Primary, E9, for a morning of storytelling last month.

Mr Ardagh said: "It's great to come to a school like this and connect with lots of different children from different schools.

"I'm not just here to talk about my books but to inspire children to love books in general – although if they like my stories, so much the better.

"One of the great things about writing is that we can draw our inspirations from all over the place and coming to schools and getting the children involved gives me inspiration."

Organiser Jo De Guia, of Victoria Park Books, whose five-year-old daughter Matilda goes to Orchard Primary, said: "It went really, really well – it was a dream event. The children were totally involved and seemed to really enjoy it."

Confucius gets a gong

HACKNEY Music Development Trust has been awarded the prestigious Royal Philharmonic Society Award for Education for its opera Confucius Says.

Thousands of pupils from nine schools in the borough spent a year working with professionals to stage the production at the Hackney Empire last summer, to tie in with the 2008 Beijing Olympic and Paralympic Games. Children of all ages helped make sets, costumes and props.

This is the second time the Trust, which is supported by The Learning Trust, has won the award. The jury were impressed and inspired by the range, quality and musical vision of this year's nominations.

In particular, they added, there was a real sense of projects being embedded within their community and of innovative, often artistically challenging planning.

NEWS IN BRIEF

Representative verse

FOUR Hackney students selected to become Poet Laureates for their schools developed their talents under the guidance of writer Kayo Chingonvi.

The position is awarded across the country every two years to pupils who have demonstrated excellent poetry skills. Every Hackney secondary has its own laureate, who will all have the chance to perfect their skills at a series of workshops. Sabrina, 15, of Hackney Free & Parochial School, E9, who is overall laureate for the borough, plus Niquelle, 15, from Cardinal Pole, E9, Galatia, 15, from Our Lady's Convent High School, N16, and Shannique, 16, of Stormont House, E5, were critiqued on written exercises set by Kayo, who works with The Poetry Society.

The initiative is part of Linking Work with Learning, a partnership initiative between Team Hackney, the local strategic partnership, The Learning Trust, Linklaters and Inspire! The Education Business Partnership.

Celebrating partnership

BRIDGE Academy, E2, played host to the Lord Mayor of the City of London Ian Luder, for the official opening of the prestigious Lord Mayor's Dragon awards.

The awards, now in their 22nd year, celebrate the achievements of London businesses and public bodies that actively involve and support local communities.

The school, which is sponsored by UBS Investment Bank, was presented with a Dragon Award community partner certificate for its ongoing partnership with UBS.

After the presentation entertainment included music from Bridge Academy students and a talk from a group of four older people about their experience of the Blitz.

Star of the screen

A STUDENT from Hackney Community College has been awarded a coveted place on a media course after impressing professionals with his music video.

Wayne Yeboah (right), 18, is studying for a BTEC national award in media. His film Conversations With A Cabbie earned him a position on the 2012 media summer school at Ravensbourne College, Kent. The 2012 media skills programme, organised by Creative Way, was set up to ensure that young people will benefit from the Media Centres being created in Hackney for the 2012 Games.

Wayne's tutor Anna Johnson said: "Wayne should be so incredibly proud of his achievement. He produced a stunning music video, which has given him this wonderful opportunity."

Green Champions

The Green Champions are a network of green thinking Hackney residents who encourage friends, family, colleagues and neighbours to reduce, reuse and recycle the waste they produce. As well as hearing about the latest initiatives the Recycling Team plan to introduce and receiving feedback at monthly meetings, members are also encouraged to get involved in any community events. This could include being involved in the planning for the event or running a stall to talk to residents about being more green!

To join, call the Recycling Hotline on 020 8356 6688 or for more information and to check out profiles of active Green Champions, go to www.hackney.gov.uk/green_champions.htm

Playing snap

A trace of my existence, Chats Palace, Brooksby's Walk, E9, until 31 August

THIS collection of black and white photos by, and of, young people growing up in the poorest areas of Columbia, is exactly what the title suggests. The Click por los Barrios scheme was set up by a group of professional photographers. Given a camera to take snaps of their everyday lives, the children's pictures are honest and charming. Their natural composition reflects the openness and energy of the young subjects, despite a backdrop of violence and poverty. Knowing the context in which the photos are taken lends them extra depth, as do the excited words of those taking part with the project.

In literature accompanying the display, one young photographer describes the process of taking and making a photo as 'magical'. His comment that 'as we realise that a recorded moment in time will increasingly be cherished, the further away it becomes' shows a great philosophical understanding of the human interest in taking photos.

SALVAGE and reinvigoration is becoming a popular way of life in the UK, as people seek out ways to cut waste and save money.

This cultural phenomenon is being celebrated with an exhibition named after a 1943 book published by the Ministry of Information.

It suggested ways for people living through the Second World War to get the most from their food, clothes and household goods at a time when items were at their scarcest – and in the current economic climate these tips are as handy today as they were over 65 years ago. Schoolchildren worked with local artists and designers including Hackney's Ruth Weinberg to breathe new life into forgotten furniture by using classic techniques. The children's work is inspired by salvage designers Jon Male, Max McMurdo and Lou Rota, who all combine art with recycling everyday products to create stylish, modern items, such as roll-top bath sofas and supermarket trolley chairs.

The dancers demonstrated incredible acrobatics

By Jennifer Riley

Balé de Rua @ the Barbican Theatre, 21 May

THE Balé de Rua (street ballet) clearly delighted audiences with an awe-inspiring display of home-grown dance. Succinctly combining capoeira, hip hop, breakdancing, samba and Afro-Brazilian percussion, the team of 15 dancers aimed to energetically trace the country's history from its African roots to contemporary Brazil.

The stage set was simple, and the costumes were skimpy. But the raw, natural talent of the dancers did captivate. The stand-out piece came in the form of an exciting, gypsy-inspired solo from the lone female dancer in the company, who also admirably kept pace over the 75 minutes with the incredible acrobatics of her male counterparts. The Balé de Rua thoroughly enjoy themselves and they can certainly thrill and entertain, even with such a stripped down, instinctive performance.

Music biz explained

RISING Tide is an organisation that gives young people the opportunity to learn a whole range of skills.

They can work on producing their own music, artist development, multimedia skills, graphic design and event management – not to mention gain inside expertise from music industry professionals.

Well-known musicians such as Bashy and K.I.G. Family are due to use Rising Tide's rehearsal space, while rising stars, such as Scrappy, Labyrinth and Size 10 have all worked there.

One of the best features of Rising Tide is the fact that it has an open-door policy, which means any young people who are interested in the music world can just walk in.

The youth mentors at Rising Tide are honest and tell young people what they need to hear instead of what they want to hear. This is good because young people need things broken down to them and other options in the music industry explained to them. For example, someone may not be able to be a singer but they could be a songwriter.

“Rising Tide mentors tell young people what they need to hear instead of what they want to hear”

We went to Rising Tide and interviewed a few of the young people who regularly attend. Renee, 18, told us about how she has developed during her time at Rising Tide.

She said: “I started off as an artist here singing and then I slowly got involved in events management.”

Another young person also told us about what

Shannique and Antonio learnt a lot about the music industry here she has learnt. She said: “I’ve got a load of new skills from it.

“Before, I knew about working on events but I never knew about being behind the events, seeing the set-up and stuff.

“It’s been interesting and really good fun learning about that. So now that’s one of the courses that I want to go on to learn at uni.”

We hope Rising Tide continues to keep working in this excellent way.

All the world's a stage, in Hoxton

A NEW generation of local actors, dancers, musicians and singers will be hoping to get a shot at stardom after a Shoreditch-based performance arts agency chose its first 15 members.

Hoxton Street Auditions – run partly by young people – supports teenagers who are hoping to eventually get work in the creative and performing arts industries. More than 100 people attended the agency's first casting in May, where each was asked to perform a short monologue of their choice.

The chosen 15 will now take part in a six-week course to help them develop their theatrical techniques, as well as gain an NVQ and a QCA-accredited arts award.

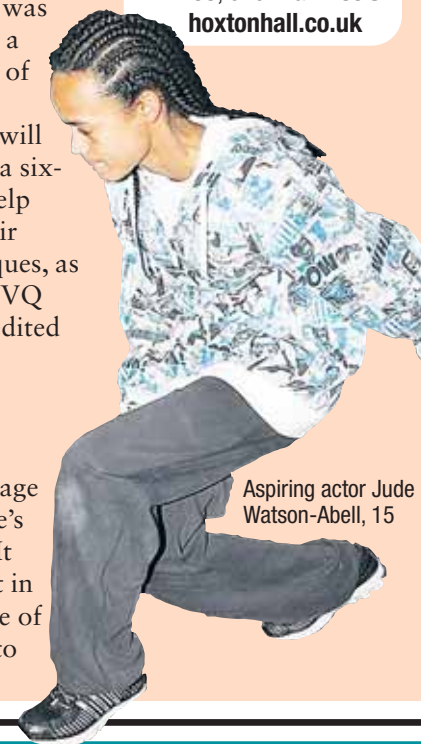

One successful auditionee, Rhys Hollis, who performed a passage from Shakespeare's Henry IV, said: “It was amazing that in such a short space of time this got me to look at drama completely differently, to think about it as a profession.”

Alan Bell, Hoxton Street Auditions' young persons' agency co-ordinator, said that participants aged between 16 and 19 will also have a chance to work in the agency to gain a broader view of the industry.

My opinion

Young offenders turning their anger into music

By Shannique Smith, 16,
Antonio Akue, 15 &
Ola Adeniran, 13

NO Limitz presents M.O.N.E.Y. is a compilation album of work by young musicians from Hackney Youth Offending Team.

It was put together by Rising Tide, who do music projects with young people in Hackney. Hackney Youth Offending Team is a support group for people who have got into trouble with the police. The CD is a way to help them channel their anger and turn it into music. We feel that the CD basically speaks for itself. The musicians talk about their daily struggles. Our thoughts about the album are that the young men rapping all acknowledge the fact that they have failed in some way; trying to change things and making it right is all they wish.

Track 4 was one of our favourites.

The young rapper spoke about making money for his family and himself. He said: “I got to get this money if I want to survive.”

He also said: “I hate waking up early, all those missions in the morning. On the train blinking and yawning.”

We thought these lyrics were good because he talks about other people who are trying to make a living and he recognises his surroundings by identifying the obstacles that people face in modern urban society. Although the actual content of the CD was good, we thought the presentation was lacking.

Improvements to Hackney Downs Park Entrance

As part of the preparation for the 2012 Olympic Games, development is taking place on a new cycling and walking route between Finsbury Park and Victoria Park, which is one of the main cycling parking locations during the games.

The route passes through Hackney Downs Park whose entrance on Downs Road has been identified for improvements which include:

- The installation of a raised table at the entrance to Hackney Downs Park
- Upgrading the area around the park entrance with paving slabs
- Removing the existing road humps just before the entrance
- Introducing double yellow lines to prevent blocking of the park entrance.

Staff at the Homerton hospital cut a cake to celebrate National Nurses' Day and mark the anniversary of the birth of Florence Nightingale

Going with the Flo for tea

NURSES and midwives at Homerton Hospital celebrated National Nurses' Day with tea and cake.

This day is celebrated each year by NHS staff on the anniversary of Florence Nightingale's (right) birthday. Chief Nurse Pauline Brown said: "12 May is an important date in the diary for nurses and midwives as we celebrate the 'first nurse'.

"It also give us an opportunity to recognise the invaluable contribution made everyday to our hospital and the whole NHS by our nurses and midwives."

Florence Nightingale became known as 'the lady with the lamp' for her work with injured soldiers in the Crimean War in the 1850s.

Brush up on hygiene

All stories by

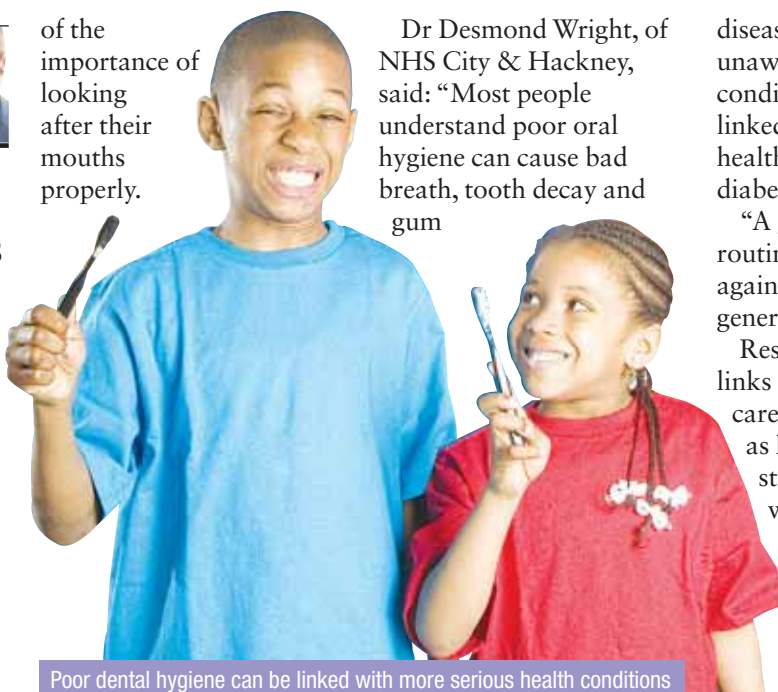

Nick Rutherford

AS part of national smile month, NHS City & Hackney's oral health team is visiting community groups, health centres, schools and places of worship to give advice on improving dental care.

A survey conducted by the British Dental Health Foundation as part of the month, which runs until June 16, has highlighted people's lack of awareness of the importance of looking after their mouths properly.

Poor dental hygiene can be linked with more serious health conditions

Dr Desmond Wright, of NHS City & Hackney, said: "Most people understand poor oral hygiene can cause bad breath, tooth decay and gum disease, but many are unaware that these conditions have been linked to more serious health conditions such as diabetes and heart disease.

"A good oral healthcare routine can help guard against all sorts of oral and general health problems."

Research also indicates links between poor dental care and conditions such as heart attacks, strokes, and low birth weight.

NEWS IN BRIEF

An artist's impression of how the main entrance to St Leonard's could look after a major revamp

Change afoot at St Leonard's

NHS staff will be at Hoxton Market, N1, on 13 June, to talk to residents about plans to give St Leonard's Hospital a major makeover.

The Kingsland Road hospital is about to undergo some big changes and local NHS organisations are seeking the views of people in the area about building plans for new health facilities. NHS staff will have a stall to give local people a first look at the plans, and listen to their feedback.

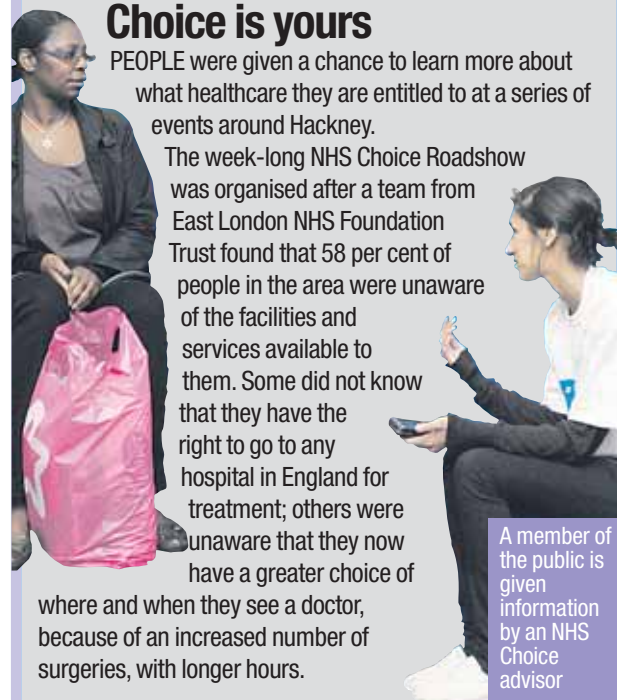

One of the new buildings will be a primary care resource centre – a one-stop shop where people can access a range of health services. East London NHS Foundation Trust also hopes to provide a modern therapeutic environment for local people who need in-patient mental health care. It is hoped that six wards will be developed at St Leonard's, housing 115 beds.

Choice is yours

PEOPLE were given a chance to learn more about what healthcare they are entitled to at a series of events around Hackney.

The week-long NHS Choice Roadshow was organised after a team from East London NHS Foundation Trust found that 58 per cent of people in the area were unaware of the facilities and services available to them. Some did not know that they have the right to go to any hospital in England for treatment; others were unaware that they now have a greater choice of where and when they see a doctor, because of an increased number of surgeries, with longer hours.

A member of the public is given information by an NHS Choice advisor

Praise for professionalism

Dear sir,

I have recently been a patient in the Homerton Hospital, and wish to convey through your newspaper my sincere gratitude to all the doctors, nurses and staff who looked after and cared for me with their professionalism, dedication and consideration for my wellbeing, which was second to none.

Yours sincerely, Wally (Walter) Oliver, Manchester

HACKNEY CUSTOMER SERVICES CENTRE CAFÉ & SANDWICH ROUND

EXPRESSIONS OF INTEREST

Expressions of interest are sought from suitably experienced caterers to manage and run the catering services that will operate within the brand new Hackney Customer Services Centre which will open in Hillman Street, in the centre of Hackney, London E8 early in 2010, as follows:

1. A café within the Customer Services Centre which will contain:

- Public access counters for Council services.
- Self-serve points for customers to access Council services by phone and web.
- A customer waiting area containing c.120 seats.
- Anticipated number of customers visiting the centre c.1,500.
- Over 1500 Council Staff.

The café will be required to open from 9.00 am until 5.00 pm, Monday to Friday, except Bank Holidays.

Future potential exists for third sector organisations (e.g. charities, voluntary groups, educational establishments, government agencies) to be co-located with Council services on the ground floor.

2. A Sandwich Round

- This will allow c.2,500 Council staff within the entire Hackney Council "campus", including the new Customer Services Centre and three adjacent buildings, to purchase pre-packaged sandwiches/snacks etc.

The contract will combine both of these elements and will initially be let for a period of three years and may be extended by an additional two years subject to mutual agreement. The successful applicant will be expected to adopt the Council's ethos of high quality, responsive customer service.

Interest is particularly welcomed from caterers operating a Fair Trade policy, from Social Enterprises and from local businesses in the Borough.

For an information pack containing a Pre-Tender Questionnaire please contact Alexis Adonis on: 0208 356 3530 or alexis.adonis@hackney.gov.uk. The deadline for the return of completed questionnaires is Friday 17th July 2009.

Barn bows out

By Sally England
Local Studies Librarian

AFTER the execution of Colonel John Okey in 1662, little is known about who lived at Barber's Barn until 1715.

It was purchased from a widow called Katherine Clark by John Lewis, 'citizen and grocer' of the parish of St Sepulchre, Newgate.

We know from parish rate books, now held at the Archives, that as well as the house itself the property had an acre and a half of grounds.

In 1731 Lewis leased the house to Gabriel Lopez Dias, also known as Pinheiro, also known as Pedro Forte.

Dias was a shadowy character, a Jewish refugee who had fled from the Inquisition in Portugal and was alleged to owe a large sum to the Portuguese crown. He continued to trade with his homeland and exported diamonds to Vienna. He also acted as attorney in London for the Portuguese Marquis of Govia, in what appears to be a breach of contract by the aristocrat over the sale of slaves.

Dias only stayed at Barber's Barn for a few years, after which the house remained vacant until the late 1730s. The next tenant was the Quaker pharmacist Silvanus Bevan who remained at Barber's Barn until his death in 1765 when his brother Timothy moved in.

The Bevan family holds an important place in London business history. In 1715 Silvanus founded a drug manufacturing shop in Plough Court, off Lombard Street, which eventually became part of the modern multinational pharmaceutical company Glaxo Smith Kline.

Timothy Bevan died in 1786 after which John Vowell, director of the Humane Society, took up residency at Barber's Barn but he soon departed after the death of his daughter. The freehold had remained with the Lewis family, passing from John to his daughters Elizabeth and Susannah.

In 1792 Susannah Campbell, now widowed, sold the freehold to her neighbour, the horticulturalist Conrad Loddiges, who eventually demolished the old house to make way for a smart new family home.

Quite when Barber's Barn disappeared is not clear — it may have survived into the early 1820s — but one small mystery regarding its final years has recently been solved. A watercolour dating from around 1800, includes a sign identifying it as 'Mr Worsley's school'.

No trace of Mr Worsley or his school had been found until Isobel Watson, chair of the Friends of Hackney Archives, noticed a line in the registers of the Sun Fire Office recording that in 1803 Loddiges insured property including a 'house in Mare Street Hackney in tenure of schoolmaster, £400'.

There were many such small schools in Hackney at the time, and Loddiges appears to have been cashing in on the trend before he demolished the now aged and unfashionable 16th century Barber's Barn.

All stories by
Gabriel Harriss

YOUNG people took part in safety events to help keep them from danger when crossing roads – and stay on their toes at the same time.

The Roadwise Rangers were in Springfield Park providing children with activities to help them stay fit, and also to keep them safe, by showing how these same sports skills can be used out on the streets.

The Roadwise scheme also encourages healthy eating, tackles obesity and aims to get children active and into the spirit of the 2012 Olympic and Paralympic Games.

The Hackney road safety team was also on hand to check that car seats were correctly fitted and offered in-car safety advice at drop-in testing sessions at Tesco car park in Morning Lane.

Cllr Alan Laing, Cabinet Member for Neighbourhoods said: "Child seats can reduce the chances of a child being injured or even killed in a car accident but only if they're fitted correctly.

"Research carried out by Trading Standards found that on average, eight out of 10 children's car seats are fitted incorrectly.

Top spot for sustainable travellers

HACKNEY has achieved further recognition as the London borough that employs the most 'sustainable transport'.

This means people travel in a way that makes a positive contribution to the environment – using public transport, cycling or walking. The London Travel Demand Survey, carried out by Transport for London (TfL) randomly selects 8,000 households in the capital each year to give an indication of how Londoners travel.

Results this year indicate that Hackney remains a top performer in the use of public transport, walking and cycling.

More work travel trips were taken by bicycle than any other London borough and there are more women cyclists here than men – the reverse of other areas.

Cllr Alan Laing, Cabinet Member for Neighbourhoods, said: "The results are further recognition of the investment the Council is putting into sustainable transport. Walking, cycling and public transport are growing in popularity and becoming safer and more attractive for people travelling in the borough."

NEWS IN BRIEF

Network Rail workers digging in at the wildflower meadow

Transformation is underway

WORK to transform parts of Homerton Station into a wildflower meadow is well under way.

Community group Friends of Homerton Station and Network Rail's maintenance team have started clearing existing vegetation and litter from the embankments. Over the summer, work will continue to remove grasses and weeds to make way for an environment where wildlife-friendly plants can thrive.

Network Rail's Maintenance Protection Co-ordinator, Lee Draper, said: "Network Rail's maintenance team is delighted to be involved with this innovative project. "We look forward to seeing snowdrops, primroses, foxgloves, buttercups and a variety of other wildflowers at the station."

London Fields is just the ticket

PASSENGER numbers at London Fields Station have soared by 27 per cent over the past year, figures reveal.

It is thought the growth in numbers is a result of improvements in train frequency and reliability in recent years, along with the introduction of Oyster card readers. The current daily user figure is 2,066, compared to 1,625 in 2008.

Evening peak numbers increased by 32 per cent, from 567 in 2008 to 747 currently.

Train operator National Express has recently delivered a service that is more than 90 per cent reliable, and has also improved its internal information systems at the station, so staff can receive updates more quickly when there are delays or other operating problems.

The Council now monitors cameras at London Fields Station and a Safer Travel Team is based at Hackney Downs Station with police and security staff now operating in teams.

London Fields Station

Hackney is now recognised as the most improved Council in the UK, serving one of the most diverse populations. Regeneration is improving housing, public services and transport links. Crime is falling. Exam results are up. The Olympics are coming...

Job vacancies

Community Services

Medical Adviser

£32,211-£34,707

Closing date: 30 June

Ref: CS542

You'll assess the housing problems of people with health needs and disabilities. You'll work in consultation with health and social care professionals when making assessments, and make referrals for applicants to Council services and our partners. You'll also represent the team on multi-agency boards and steering groups. A state-registered health care professional, you'll bring post-qualification experience of working in a diverse community, plus strong communication, organisation and IT skills.

For an informal discussion, call Remi Osadiya on: 020 8356 5739.

Administrator, Approved Mental Health Professional team

£25,263-£26,742

Closing date: 19 June

Ref: CS543

This is a varied role where you'll work at different locations, and across a range of services.

You'll give the manager and team general administrative support. In particular you'll collect key performance data in relation to carers, and input it into Hackney's integrated service client database; set up and maintain financial systems; and manage staff records.

You'll have experience of dealing with matters of a highly sensitive nature, plus experience of undertaking complex data collection in a local authority. Skilled in using Microsoft Word, Excel and Access, you will have a NVQ qualification in Business Administration or relevant experience.

Neighbourhoods & Regeneration

Anti-social Behaviour Performance and Projects Officer

£27,669-£29,277

Closing date: 16 June

Ref: NR535

This is your chance to become involved in a new approach to the management of anti-social behaviour in Hackney. You will enable the Council and its main partners to provide a better service by developing a performance framework, analysing and interpreting performance, and planning and delivering short-term projects. Whatever your background, you will be strong on IT, particularly Microsoft Excel, with proven analytical skills, an understanding of performance management techniques, and knowledge of multi-agency casework management systems. Experience of developing databases and supporting projects is vital. For an informal chat, call Barry Scales on: 020 8356 3137 or 07891 406 668.

Job Profile Barry Scales

Anti-social Behaviour Team Manager, talks to Hackney Today about the Anti-social Behaviour Performance and Projects Officer role

What are the main responsibilities of the role?

The team is dedicated to making the borough a safer place. The purpose of the role is to ensure the Council and its partners provide effective services for residents and businesses.

The successful candidate will develop and maintain ways of monitoring the tackling of anti-social behaviour in Hackney.

They will also work with partners to agree sources and standards of information, and then present reports to the anti-social behaviour management group.

What are the ideal qualities you are looking for?

We need someone with excellent communication skills who can confidently network outside of the Council, negotiating with our partners and community groups. Back in the office, you'll need good IT skills, particularly in Excel, and be able to present information to managers clearly. Ideally you'll have an understanding of how case management systems work, but it doesn't need to be from anti-social behaviour or local government experience. We're looking for someone with initiative who can take responsibility for their workload, as well as contributing to a supportive team.

Why is it good to work for Hackney?

The Council is prepared to lead on serious issues, delivering innovative solutions to help the community. As part of the anti-social behaviour team, you'll have the opportunity to be a part of solution-focused, positive work that directly benefits the community. The team is very supportive, so as well as having the freedom to work on your own initiative, you'll have access to advice and guidance from your colleagues and managers, and be part of a wider team that is passionate about Hackney.

Recipes straight from the ovens at Hoxton Apprentice

www.hoxtonapprentice.com

THIS is the latest in a series of regular recipes courtesy of the Hoxton Apprentice restaurant. Frankie, 23, is a recently-graduated front-of-house apprentice. She joined the apprenticeship scheme in December 2008. She left school in 2002, at the age of 16; this was followed by a brief spell at sixth form college, resulting in expulsion for disruptive behaviour. After a series of temporary jobs, Frankie found that depression was taking its toll on her ability to get work. She discovered Training for Life and Hoxton Apprentice through her advisor at Fairbridge, an organisation working with young unemployed people. Recently graduated with a NVQ Level 2, she is optimistic about the future: "Thanks to Training for Life and Hoxton Apprentice I have really achieved something to be proud of. The programme has given me the skills and confidence to make something of my life." Frankie is now concentrating on her career and is keen to develop her skills further, with a view to setting up her own business in Australia.

Eton Mess

Serves 4-6

Preparation time
10 mins

Chilling time
As long as you like

Ingredients

- 800g fresh ripe strawberries
- Cointreau, to taste
- 1 tbsp icing sugar, sifted
- 200g fresh cream for whipping
- 200g thick Greek-style yoghurt
- 6 plain meringues or meringue shells

Method

- Wash strawberries, then remove stalks
- If large, cut in half or cut into thick slices
- Place 600g of strawberries in a bowl and sprinkle with 2tbsp of Cointreau. Dust with icing sugar and chill for an hour or two
- Whiz remaining 200g of berries into a puree, adding a dash of Cointreau to taste, and chill
- Whip cream lightly, fold in yoghurt, and chill. Roughly crush the meringues into bite-sized pieces
- When you are ready to serve, gently toss cream, meringue and strawberries and pile the lot into a glass bowl. Drizzle with strawberry puree. Toss once and then serve

Top Apprentice tip: When raspberries are in season you may want to try using them

The Hoxton Apprentice is a social enterprise set up to train unemployed Hackney people – both in the kitchen and front of house. Six month apprenticeships prepare people for the workplace and give them the chance to gain a NVQ in hospitality. Profits are returned to Training For Life, the charity which operates the restaurant, to deliver more training for unemployed people.

If you would like to offer an apprentice a job, or become an apprentice yourself, call Patrick Lyster-Todd on: 020 7749 2805. For more info, visit: www.hoxtonapprentice.com

Drink aware

THERE is still time to give your views on tackling alcohol related anti-social behaviour in and around Hoxton.

Residents and businesses have expressed concerns about anti-social behaviour in Hoxton Street and outside St. Monica's Primary School. The Council is looking at increasing police patrols in the area, as well as an outreach programme for street drinkers.

Other measures being considered are the introduction of a Designated Public Place Order (DPPPO), which allows police to confiscate alcohol being consumed in a designated area. Offenders may be prosecuted if they fail to comply.

Cllr Alan Laing, Cabinet Member for Neighbourhoods, said: "This is not about stopping people from drinking alcohol, it is a way of dealing with alcohol related anti-social behaviour by anyone who makes life a misery for everybody else." Residents and businesses have been sent a leaflet explaining the proposals and have until 19 June to respond. Call: 020 7161 9234; e-mail: jenny.donaldson@met.police.uk; or visit: www.consultationfinder.com/hackney

Park proposals

THANKS to everyone who gave the Council their views on improvements to Millfields Park – over 300 responses were received.

An overwhelming 77 per cent were in favour of new public toilets; 76 per cent wanted to see the refurbishment of the playground; 73 per cent were for a new cafe; and 70 per cent favoured new flowerbeds. The majority also wanted new changing rooms, and wanted the old park lodge to be turned into a new cafe. Concerns were raised over dog control. Hackney parks service and the user group are looking at the results and will use them to make plans for Millfields. These results are a taster of what investments people would like to see. A full report will soon be available at www.consultationfinder.com/hackney; or to request a paper version call Sam Parry on: 020 8356 4899.

The Mayor & Councillors

Councillors are elected by Hackney residents and serve for four years. The last borough elections were in May 2006.

Councillors have a range of responsibilities, including helping to oversee the Council and its services. They all hold advice surgeries where you can meet your local representative and ask them to take up issues that may be of concern.

Generally they can help with Council related matters, but if the issue is the responsibility of another person or organisation, they can often point you in the right direction and tell you who you need to see.

Hackney has 57 councillors representing areas called wards – illustrated in the map opposite.

Please note: some councillors do not hold surgeries during the school summer holidays. Call the number below to check.

To check which councillor covers your area, or confirm surgery times, call: 020 8356 3373. More info: www.hackney.gov.uk/1-mayor-cabinet-councillors.htm

Hackney Council is committed to improving services, increasing opportunities for all, and making a safer, cleaner, greener borough. Here we focus on a service that helps to make this possible:

RESPITE SUCCESS

Christine Henry, Homeshare Daycare scheme co-ordinator

Christine set up the Homeshare Daycare scheme from scratch in 2000. She was asked to do this by her previous manager Denise Murphy, who had heard of the first scheme of this type that was running in Ipswich. "Denise was a real pioneer," says Christine. "She asked me to go and look at how the service worked in Ipswich and see how we could get it to work here."

The main difference, she says, is that there is far greater cultural diversity in Hackney.

The second youngest of 10 children, Christine was born and raised in the borough and is a qualified nurse; she trained at University College Hospital, London.

Based at the Marie Lloyd Day Centre, she originally started working for the Council in 1986, then left to work for Islington, before returning in 1993.

She said: "I'm passionate about communities and the provision of care services in the community. I'm passionate about this service because it is meeting all the things I am interested in."

Take a break

By
Nick Rutherford

THE Homeshare Daycare scheme allows people who are carers time to take a break from their caring role, to take time out for themselves.

A carer is someone who provides unpaid help and support to a relative or friend who could not manage without their help. If they are studying, need to visit the doctor or dentist, or just want time out to socialise from time to time, they can call on the service.

Volunteers take the person who is being cared for into their own home and look after them while their carer is away for a few hours.

Currently, the service operates between 10.30am and 3.30pm, Monday to Friday, but the Council is looking into the possibility of extending this to cover weekends.

At the moment there are 15 volunteers offering respite to carers in the borough but service manager Christine Henry is looking for more; she also wants to hear from more carers who would like support to be able to take a break. She said: "In a volunteer I look for a caring nature and the ability to understand the needs of the carer as well as the person being cared for."

Volunteers are trained to NVQ level two, they must

Homeshare Daycare means that carers can take a break while the person they look after spends time in a volunteer's home be 18 or over – the oldest Christine has worked with was 80.

Hackney was only the second borough in the UK to run the scheme, following the lead of Ipswich – now Christine advises people as far away as New Zealand on how to set up their own services.

She said: "Our volunteers are important because they are providing valuable support to carers. It's a very individualised service. Each home is different."

Provision of Taxi Services Framework - Supplementary

London Borough of Hackney Children and Young Peoples Service & Community Services

(Ref CYPS/CS/TS/2009)

Hackney Council invites expressions of interest from Taxi/Transport Providers who can provide drivers and escorts to supplement our existing taxi framework contracts. The contract will run up to 31st March 2011.

The Council has a statutory responsibility to safeguard and promote the welfare of children, vulnerable adults and older people looked after by them. As this contract involves providing a service to vulnerable people, we are seeking companies who can provide the following:

- A base within a 1 mile radius of Hackney.
- Full UK Drivers licence as well as a Private Hire Drivers Licence, including appropriate insurance.
- All vehicles must hold a current PHV licence issued by the PCO (or equivalent).
- All drivers/escorts must hold a valid enhanced Criminal Record Bureau check that is updated every eighteen (18) months.
- Have a working knowledge of the streets of Hackney.
- Are able to accept credit card (Purchase card) payments.
- Are able to comply with our taxi monitoring requirements which are available on request within the tender documents.

Specification and application details may be obtained by writing to Carmen Oliver, Room 313, 205 Morning Lane, Hackney, London, E9 6JX or by e-mail to: cyps.itt@hackney.gov.uk no later than Monday 22nd June 2009, 5pm.

Please note that tender queries will not be responded to after Monday 22nd June 2009, 5pm.

Closing date for completed tender applications is Monday 29th June 2009, 5pm
